FIFTY YEARS.—Wednesday evening last, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dickerson near Rawsonville were visited without notice by about eighty of their old friends and neighbors bearing golden gifts in commemoration of the fact that Mr. and Mrs. D. had reached the 50th year of their married life. Appropriate gifts were they too, for at the age respectively of 80 and 65, it is fair to suppose that two pairs of golden eyes (spectacles) would fill a much felt want. It is said that the presentation speech by Mr. Charles Stanley and the reply were given in most appropriate and kindly words. A grand time was had all around, and like all gay and giddy banqueters the guests stayed near to the small hours. Mr. and Mrs. D. came to this place about 1855 and have lived in the same place ever since, full of honors and surrounded by hosts of friends.

GOOD FOR THE STUDENTS .- Five of Prof. Cleary's students received lucrative situations last week, and he tells us he has completed arrangements by which he can secure positions for all of his shorthand students when competent, and expects soon to have a like arrangement for placing those who graduate from the commercial department. This is very important for the young people who have qualified themselves for good work, but who in many cases lack the acquaintance that more readily secures situations. The demand for such services is rapidly growing, and more will be demanded in the next few months than ever before. We regard Prof. Cleary's institution as one of very great and increasing value. Students who can commence a course this spring and be assured of an opportunity for profitable employment the same season, enjoy privileges that have not heretofore been com-

A WORD FROM WASHINGTON .- A private letter from Congressman Allen to our any one who was not a member of the townsman, Mr. W. B. Clark, is to the effect that the Blair Bill is only in abeyance for the time: that while some in the Committee are disposed to smother it, there will be a right lively fight over it before it is packed away in the pigeon hole. Mr. Allen thinks that the South should not pleads the ignorance of the colored man, in justification of the offense of refusing him the ballot, and at the same time reject the wholesome measure proposed, to educate him. The Captain is too good a lawyer not to know that no man or state can take advantage of his own wrong in pleading justification, and that the plain duty of the South is to educate or with-

Their inefficiency under the system of township inspection had become so marked that the people demanded something better, and at last the legislature a year ago provided that the county board of Inspectors should have a secretary whose time should be devoted to organizing and in other ways infusing more inspiration into the schools. In Washtenaw Co. Mr. E. C. Warner of Ypsilanti township was appointed to this office and is now at work rigorously to bring the schools into a better condition. Mr. W. is a man eminently qualified for this work and we have no doubt he will make a great change in the schools for the better, before his term of office expires. It is to be hoped he will and Charles Fletcher. This committee is have the hearty coöperation of the District officers, as he is a practical man and one who knows what a good school is,

The weather when community, and managed the affairs of he was in Florida and the West Indies was a source of exquisite delight and made one feel, "oh so lazy" that the sensation produced was what might be imagined in purely vegetative life. He also learned many things about that dear neighbor of ours in the Gulf, fair Cuba of the sea; how American steamers are not allowed to come to dock but must anchor off about two miles and be unloaded by lighters, while the English steamers plow right past them and anchor at the dock. It was a little galling to an American's pride, but then you know Uncle Sam is very meek just now on the question of international rights. A queer thing about money came to view. The Cuban will give for $1 of Uncle Sam's greenback, $2.50 of Spanish paper, but will give only $2.20 for our silver dollar. Really it is a queer state of things when one's credit is better than his coin, but that is just where Uncle Sam finds himself in Cuba. The whole male population of warlike age are enrolled in the militia, and detachments, one each morning, have to march from Grand Square to the Captain General's office, until all have performed duty, and then the rotating operation is gone over again. They have police in ten grades, and the band a hundred strong plays every was not considered dangerously sick and night around Queen Isabel's Statue in the the announcement of his demise was a Grand Square. Prohibition City Ticket.

The mass convention at Council Hall Tuesday night, mustered 23 votes. The greatest discussion was over the questions whether any except members of the pro hibition party had a right to vote, and whether any one had a right to vote for prohibition party; and the chief anxiety expressed was as to the orthodoxy of the candidates who were being voted for. The list of names shows that the anxiety was not wholly groundless. The following are the nominations:

The Caucuses To-Night.

Party tickets are to be presented to the oters of this city for their choice next or prohibion party men. As citizens we whether they shall be defeated.

Therefore, it is of the highest importnow that we are to have party nominations, that those men most worthy of support should be nominated. There is one certain way to secure that result, and that is the attendance at the ward caucuses tonight of all voters interested in the success of their party and the welfare of the city. The aggregate voice will be right; but a partial expression may be very wrong. The best way to insure success is to de-

The duty of a citizen is not discharged by going to the polls and casting his vote or the best man, when he has not done what he could to put that best man on the ticket where a vote for him will have the greatest value. That is nothing less than shirking of obligation and then satisfying the conscience by a pretense. It is not the mere voting for the best man that the obligation of citizenship requires—it s electing him; and there are steps just as necessary to that as the vote at the polls. Putting him upon the ticket where his election will be possible, is one of those steps, without which the vote for him is a sham and a pretense.

Every voter, then, ought to go to the caucus, just as much as to the polls.

The many friends and relatives of Mr and Mrs. James Lowden concluded that it would be quite a proper thing to do, to give them a surprise. Therefore on Wednesday evening, March 21, it being the twentieth anniversary of their wedded life, they found themselves completely taken, not only by the merry people who throng ed the house, but by the beautiful deco rated china tea set, a pretty water set and various other elegant gifts, as mementoes of esteem. In due season they were pre sented to Mr. and Mrs. Lowden. Mr. L. responded in words that proceeded not done from the mouth, but from the heart, after which a delicious supper was served. When the gracious Spirit, who makes us all one, had called the attention of thoughtful men, in both branches, to the subject, it was found that they were subscribing to the same confession of faith, teaching the same doctrines in their pulpits and theological seminaries, and that they held identically the same position touching the iniquity of slavery, and the support due to the Government in its struggle with the armed force which had risen up in defense of slavery.

And then, with a touch of fine irony, he adds:

The difference between them consisted in the fact that the Old School Assembly called their Committees "Boards," and the New School Assembly called their Boards "Committees."

That measures the seriousness of the essential difference which separate other denominations who find as great difficulty in coming together as did the Old School and New School Presbyterians.

Writing of the war period, he says: Writing of the war period, he says:
For many years Providential orderings had been, in a remarkable manner, unfavorable to the institution [of slavery], the very efforts put forth in its interest, having been overruled for its serious detriment. The Divine purpose, so long voiced by individual ministers, philanthropists, and statesmen—which had so often taken form in ecclesiastical resolutions and denunciations—began to find loud and positive utterance from the multitudes. The Divine power, which had wrought so patiently and mercifully through moral influences, began to take on a sterner aspect; and he who read events from the standpoint, not of statesmanship, but of Divine Providence, could easily see that the doom of American slavery was sealed.

Who shall predict the future of this Presbytery? and what shall its standing be when the Assembly writes upon the history of its second centennial? It has large room for development, and opportunity for grand conquests. Covering a wide area of richly productive soil, having within its bounds the rapidly growing city of Detroit, Ann Arbor the seat of the State University, Ypsilanti the seat of the State Normal School, and other centers of thrift and influence, it ought to take rank, at no distant day, with the best and most efficient Presbyteries in our Church. Literary Notes.

The Detroit Tribune of Sunday gave a personal sketch of Robert Louis Stevenson, who became famous in this country through his unique work, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." The sketch is by Louise Chandler Moulton, and is accompanied by a portrait that is certainly not a thing of beauty. In the same issue occurs the first installment of Mr. Stevenson's serial ro mance, "The Outlaws of Tunstall Forest," with illustrations by leading artists of the standard monthlies. DECORATE THE SOUL.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon on the Beauties of Religion and Its Lasting Effects.

Followers of the Cross the Happiest of Mortals Because of Their Grand Expectations.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., of the Brooklyn, (N. Y.) tabernacle, preached at Fort Scott, Kan., Sunday evening, March 18, to a crowded congregation. He took for his subject "The Decoration of the Soul," and his text was Luke xv., 22:

Put a ring on his hand. He said:

I will not rehearse the familiar story of the fast young man of the parable. You know what a splendid home he left. You know what a hard time he had. And you remember how, after that season of vagabondage and prodigality, he resolved to go and weep out his sorrows on the bosom of paternal forgiveness. Well, there is great excitement one day in front of the door of the old farm-house. The servants come rushing up and say: "What's the matter? what's the matter?" But before they quite arrive the old man cries out: "Put a ring on his hand." What a seeming absurdity! What can such a wretched mendicant as this fellow that is tramping on toward the house want with a ring? Oh, he is the prodigal son. No more tending of the swine-trough. No more longing for the pods of the carob tree. No more blistered feet. Of with the rags! On with the robe! Out with the ring! Even so does God receive every one of us when we come back. There are gold rings, and pearl rings, and carnelian rings, and diamond rings; but the richest ring that ever flashed on the vision is that I know that the impression is abroad among some people, that religion bemeans and belittles a man; that it takes all the sparkle out of his soul; that he has to exchange a out of his soul; that he has to exchange a roystering independence for an ecclesiastical straight-jacket. Not so. When a man becomes a Christian he does not go down; he starts upward. Religion multiplies one by ten thousand. Nay, the multiplier is in mfinity. It is not a blotting out—it is a polishing, it is an arborescence, it is an efflorescence, it is an irradiation. When a man comes into the kingdom of God he is not sent into a menial service, but the Lord God Almichty from the palace of heaven calls upon into a menial service, but the Lord God Almighty from the palace of heaven calls upon the messenger angels that wait upon the throne to fly and "put a ring on his hand." In Christ are the largest liberty and brightest joy and highest honor and richest adornment. "Put a ring on his hand."

I remark, in the first place, that when Christ receives a soul into His love He puts upon him the ring of adoption. In my church in Philadelphia there came the representative of a henevolent, society, in New York.

in Philadelphia there came the representative of a benevolent society in New York. He brought with him eight or ten children of the street that he had picked up and ne was trying to find for them Christian homes; and as the little ones stood on the pulpit and sung our hearts melted within us. At the close of the service a great-hearted, wealthy man came up and said: "I'll take this little bright-eyed girl, and I'll adopt her as one of my own children;" and he took her by the hand, lifted her into his carriage and by the hand, lifted her into his carriage and went away.

The next day while we were in the church gathering up garments for the poor of New York this little child came back with a bundle under her arm, and she said: "There's my old dress, perhaps some of the poor children would like to have it," while she herself was in bright and beautiful arms and those who poore immediately expressed the poor children would be she herself was in bright and beautiful arms and those who poore immediately expressed the poor of New York this little child came back with a bundle poor of New York this little child came back with a bundle poor of New York this little child came back with a bundle poor of New York this little child came back with a bundle poor of New York this little child came back with a bundle poor child response to the poor sne herself was in bright and beautiful array, and those who more immediately examined her said she had a ring on her hand. It was a ring of adoption. There are a great many persons who pride themselves on their ancestry, and they glory over the royal blood that pours through their arteries. In their line there was a lord, or a duke, or a prime resistence or a king. But when the Lord our minister, or a king. But when the Lord, our Father, puts upon us the ring of His adoption, we become the children of the Ruler of all Nations. "Behold what manner of love

Adopt! Why, then, we are brothers and sisters to all the good of earth and heaven. Minister McLane is extremely popular in Paris. Mr. McLane is now 72 years of age and is a most entertaining conversationalist. He is at work on a volume of memoirs, and those who know him well say that it will be a most readable and valuable book. heaven we shall take our share of the man-sions and palaces and temples. Henceforth let us boast no more of an earthly ancestry. The insignia of eternal glory is our coat of arms. This ring of adoption puts upon us all honor and all privilege. Now we can take the words of Charles Wesley, that prince of hymn-makers, and sing:

Come, let us join our friends above.
Who have obtained the prize,
And on the eagle wings of love
To joy celestial rise

Let all the saints terrestrial sing
With those to glory gone;
For all the servants of our King
In heaven and earth are one.

I have been told that when any of the members of any of the great secret societies of this country are in a distant city, and are of this country are in a distant city, and are in any kind of trouble, and are set upon by enemies, they have only to give a certain signal and the members of that organization will flock around for defense. And when any man belongs to this great Christian brotherhood, if he gets in trouble, in trial, in persecution, in temptation, he has only to show this ring of Christ's adoption, and all the armed cohorts of heaven will come to his rescue.

There are so many things in this world that take the are many things and fall the christian association, and I want around me a sold phalanx of men who love God and keep His commandments. Are there any here who would like to enter into that association? Then, by a simple child-like faith, apply for admission into the visib other hour when, at the close of the exhaustive watching, when you knew that the soul had fled, you took from the hand which gave back no responsive clasp, from that emactated finger, the ring that she had worn so long and worn so well.

On some anniversary day you take up that ring, and you repolish it until all the old luster comes back, and you can see it in the flash of eyes that long ago ceased to weep. Oh, it is not an unmeaning thing when I tell you that when Christ receives a soul into His keeping He puts on it a marriage ring. He endows you from that moment with all His wealth. You are one—Christ and the soul—one in sympathy, one in affection, one in hope.

There is no power in earth or nell to effect a divorcement after Christ and the sonl are united. Other kings have turned out their companions when they got weary of them, and sent them adritt from the palace gate. Ahasuerus banished Vashti; Napoleon forsook Josephine; but Christ is the husband that is true forever. Having loved you once, He loves you to the end. Did they not try to divorce Margaret, the Scotch girl, from Jesus? They said: "You must give up your religion." She said: "I can't give up my religion." And so they took her down to the beach of the sea, and they fastened her to it, expecting that as the tide came up her faithwould fail. The tide began to rise, and came up be showed higher and to the girdle, and to were the most attractive girls in the higher and higher, and to the girdle, and to the lip, and in the last moment, just as the wave was washing her soul into giory, she shouted the praises of Jesus.

were the most attractive girls in the procession, but they stampeded every livery stable they marched past.—Burdette.

O, no, you can not separate a soul from Christ. It is an everlasting marriage. Battle and storm and darkness can not do it. It is too much excitation for a man who is but dust is too much exeltation for a man who is but dust and ashes like myself, to cry out to-day: "I am persuaded that neither height, nor depth, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor any other creature shall separate me from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus, my Lord?" Glory be to God that when Christ and the soul are married they are bound by a chain, a golden chain—if I might say so—a chain with one link, and that one link the golden ring of God's everlasting love.

ring of God's everlasting love.

I go a step further and tell you that when Christ receives a soul into His love He puts on him the ring of testivity. You know it has been the custom in all ages to bestow rings on very happy occasions. There is nothing more appropriate for a birthday gift than a ring. You delight to bestow such a gift upon your children at such a time. It means joy, hilarity, festivity. Well, when this old man of the text wanted to tell how glad he was that his boy had got back he expressed it in this way. Actually, before he ordered sandals to be put on his bare feet; before he ordered the fatted calf to be killed to appease the boy's hunger he commanded "Put a ring on his hand."

Oh, it is a merry time when Christ and the soul are united. Joy of forgiveness! What a splendid thing it is to feel that all is right between me and God. What a glorious thing it is to have God just take up all the sins of my life and put them in one bundle, and then filng them into the depths of the sea, never to rise again, never to be talked of again. Pollution all gone. Darkness all illumined. God reconciled. The prodigal home. "Put a ring on his hand." Every day I find happy Christian people. I find some of them with no second coat, some of them in huts and tenement-houses, not one earthly comfort afforded them; and yet they are as happy as happy can be. They sing "Rock of ages" as no other people in the earthly comfort afforded them; and yet they are as happy as happy can be. They sing "Rock of ages" as no other people in the world sing it. They never wore any jewelry in their live but one gold ring, and that was the ring of God's undying affection. Oh, how happy religion makes us! Did it make you gloomy and sad? Did you go with your head cast down? I do not think you got religion, my brother. That is not the effect of religion. True religion is joy. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace."

are peace."
Why, religion lightens all our burdens. the source of the peak of festal bells. In front of the flaming furnace of trial it sets the forge on which scepters are hammered out. Would you not like to-day to come up from the swine-feeding and try this religion? All the ideas of heaven would come out and meet the ideas of heaven would come out and meet.

the swine-feeding and try this religion? All the joys of heaven would come out and meet you, and God would cry from the throne: "Put a ring on his hand."

You are not happy. I see it. There is no peace, and sometimes you laugh when you feel a great deal more like crying. The world is a cheat. It first wears you down with its follies, then it kicks you out into darkness. It comes back from the massacre of a million souls to attempt the destruction of your soul to day. No peace out of God. of your soul to-day. No peace out of God, but here is the fountain that can slake the thirst. Here is the harbor where you can

Would you not like, I ask you—not perfunctorily, but as one brother might talk to another—would you not like to have a pilanother—would you not like to have a pli-low of rest to put your head on? And would you not like when you retire at night, to feel that all is well, whether you wake up to-morrow morning at 6 o'clock or sleep the sleep that knows no waking? Would you not like to exchange this awful uncertainty about the future for a glorious assurance of heaven? Accept of the Lord Jesus to-day, and all is well. If on your way 'home peril should cross the street and dash your life out it would not hurt you. You would rise up immediately. You would stand in the celestial streets. You would be amid the celestial streets. You would be amid the great throng that torever worship and are forever happy. If this day some sudden disease should come upon you it would not frighten you. If you knew you were going you could give a calm farewell to your beautiful home on earth, and know that you are going right into the companionship of those who have already got beyond the toiling and the weeping.

You feel on Saturday night different from the way you feel any other night of the week. You come home from the bank, or week. You come home and you say: "Well, minister, or a king. But when the Lord, our Father, puts upon us the ring of His adoption, we become the children of the Ruler of all Nations. It matters not how poor our garments may be in this world, or how scant our bread, or how mean the hut we live in, if we have that ring of Christ's adoption upon our hand we are assured of eternal defenses.

Some of you have been thinking on this subject year after year. You have found out that this world is a poor portion. You want to be Christians. You have come almost into the kingdom of God; but there you stop, forgetful of the fact that to be almost saved is not to be saved at all. Cheery- Up, Cheer-ee.

BY LOU VALERIA WILSON. BY LOU VALERIA WILSON.
Fiercely and wildly the March winds blow,
Driving before them the falling snow,
But high on the bough of the apple tree
Our friend the robin we gladly see;
And over and over this tale is told,
"Chirp, chirp, chirp! My feet are cold!
Chirp, chirp! I am hungry, too!
What shall I do the long night through?
'Tis cold for a poor fittle fellow like me.
Cheery-up, cheery-up! Cheer-ee!"

At last the reign of cold winter o'er,
Fair spring ascends the throne once more;
And there on the blossom-laden bough
The gay young robin is swinging now.
And there is his cheerful matin song;
"Cheery-up! Cheer ee! The whole day long
I'll swing and sing the hours away.
O, lovely day! O, blossoms gay!
Did you ever a fellow so happy see?
Cheery-up, cheery-up! Cheer-ee!"

As glide the bright days of the springtime along
The gallant young robin, with burst of song
And fine brown coat and breast-knot gay,
Now goes a courting just over the way;
But his rival is there, and this we hear,
"Chirp, chirp, chirp! No rival I fear!
"Twill not be long ere I conquer my foe.
This dashing young robin will win, I know,
No lady will scorn a gay young fellow like me.
Cheery-up, cheery up! Cheer-ee!"

Spring Novelties. Although the counters are piled high with so-called spring novelties and the windows radiant with their draped brilliancy of color, figure, and stripe, the choicest importations are as yet securely locked in the importers' cases, where they will remain until the bright days of April and May bring them out. The Lenten season precludes much attention to elegant or showy dress of any sort, and so it stands to reason that the merchant will reserve his novelties until feminity is right ready to appreciate and buy. There is an advantage, however, in making selections from ginghams, sateens, and challies which come among the earliest spring novelties. Some of the first lots are opened in January. Many ladies buy early and make up their entire outfit of cotton dress before the warm weather. The ginghams are unusually pretty, showing lace stripes, cord-edged fancy stripes, tiny bourette cords, small knots, and flecks of color in rough threads, rainbow stripes of threads of different sizes, cross-bars of shaded color, lace and drawn work, blocks, stripes, and diamonds, and a score of variations of these ideas, all varied and beautiful, far surpassing those of any previous season. There are large checks and plaids made up of the most delicate, graduated stripes, tiny hair-lines of color at one edge of the design, increasing to threesuitings of last season are reproduced in the new sateens. Navy blue, black, olive, and brown grounds, with wide and narrow stripes, and rows of pinhead stripes are among the new goods. The printing is especially artistic. The shadings and fine lines are admirably done, and some of the flower patterns sketch. The new challies partake of children.—Atlanta Constitution. the same general features as the sateens. They are in light grounds with light figures. They are especially pretty for home wear for young girls' dresses when in dark shades, and the more delicate ones are in extensive demand for the pretty, simple seaside summer-resort dresses that are always made up at this season of the year. Easter Eggs.

Fashion frowned on Easter eggs long ago, but for all that the custom prevails, and from Good Friday until Easter-tide the small boy and his little mother and sister will tinker with the fruit of the hennery, stain their fingers, and burn the bottom out of at least one sauce-pan. The gold and silver eggs are to be the trumps of the season. The egg when boiled hard is allowed to get stone cold, when it is rubbed with pointers' size. The gold or silver powder, which may be bought at the artists' supply shops, is sprinkled in a saucer and the egg rolled in it till evenly covered. The fingers are on shepherd's checks of white and used to work the airylike stuff in the black or gray and black wool. shell. When gilded the name, date, or some pretty quotation is inscribed with a needle, brush, or pen. Blown eggs are the work of an artist. When the contents are sucked out the brush is applied and angel faces or spring scenes painted. Dying eggs is child's play. For red shades buy an ounce of cochineal powder and you have material for pale rose, crimson, bright scarlet, deep wine, or dark maroon shades, the weight of the color depending on the amount of dye put in the water. Eggs boiled in coffee-grounds will come out biscuit, chocolate, amber, or coffee-brown; onion-peel boiled with eggs for an hour will leave them a bright yellow, and a piece of blue, red, or green dress goods will color the shells unheard-of tints. There is nothing better than logwood. Five cents' worth of chips will paint the eggs black as well as red. Put them in cold water, and just before the boiling point is reached drop in an egg. Add a little more dye for the second and third and as the water darkens the color will deepen until a fine jet black is secured. To mottle eggs grease the the front is arranged a bit of bobinet or mull very becoming to slight figshell in spots or bars before dropping them into the dye. Use an old iron ures. spoon and sauce-pan for the operation, as both will have to be discarded. In drying put the egg in a spoon, cup, or not filled with flowers, decorated with basket with a sieve bottom, so as not to smart little bows of ribbon mixed with soak the color where the shell touches gold or silver lace.

The little square is worked with a flower border in white threads, and when stained by the sweat of the pale nun's hands an additional value is put upon the work. One must see these beautiful little napkins to men who went about preaching liberknow their charm, Delicate veins rib the leaves, petals of wild roses curl in beauty, no ringlet could be more graceful than the tendrils of the needlepainted vines, and in the lily cups and bell-flowers are dots of thread to assimilate the heart and pollen heads. All these precious webs are raw-edged and in and about the embroidery lines may be seen the blue penciling of the stamp. No one would dream of washing them. The æsthetic sprinkles it with a favorite perfume, handles it with care, and would deem it a sacrilege to more than touch her lips with it. Tears sanctify it, but wipe away a clot of soot! never!

Women as Butchers,

"Lizzie the butcher" is one of the best known women in Washington market. She deals solely in veal, and can cut up a calf as quickly and cleverly as any man. She may be seen any morning separating chops with a cleaver, or with a long blade taking the bone from a leg. She has worked in the same place twenty-five years; there were no stalls when she came to the market, but all produce was sold from baskets.

Mrs. S. M. Baker has for twentysix years sold lamb, mutton, and veal in Washington Market. She has seen many changes in the old rookery and in the people who market there. "Years ago," she says, "people depended upon the butcher to select their meats; they had it rolled in a paper and carried it away. Now women have been so educated by the market articles in the papers that they know every part of the critter and the prices current."

Mrs. Barrett was twenty years ago left a widow with two children. Since that time she has been a butcher, and is now known in the up-town locality, where she has an excellently appointed shop, as the "woman butcher." bears the reputation of being one of the best judges of meat. She is a delicate and refined looking little woman, and in or out of her store would hardly be supposed equal to so robust an occupation.—New York Post.

The Russians determining a thing in dvance let nothing stop them. Take the case of a young lawyer I met in Eastern Siberia. He had been arrested as one of the 200 propagandists, the ality in government and literature. Tried, he was one of the 193 acquitted. Some months afterward he was asked to come to dinner with the Governor of his province. The two had taken coffee, when the official said:

"I am very sorry, but have a telegram telling me to order you to Eastern Siberia.

'But on what grounds?" "I don't know; these are my only instructions."

'Getting a three weeks' respite in which to settle up his business, he was put into Moscow prison, and finally, travelling by stages, reached the place of his exile. Repeatedly on his route he pressed his captors for the reason of his arrest. Finally he was informed. The charge was not having abandoned his former criminal activity. And he had just been acquitted of having any previous activity

"One day after the young man's arrival, as he told me," said Mr. Kennan, "he was discussing with some of his companions the causes of their presence in Eastern Siberia. One had been circulating a forbidden book, and so on. It come to the lawyer. He confessed he had been unable to find out any real cause for his punishment. "Yes, I suppose so." "O, well, you needn't look any farther for the reason of your exile. The possession of a cow is sufficient.-George Kennan.

The Lessons of "Unser Fritz" Case. The greatest doctors in Europe don't seem to know what ails "Unser Fritz." Thus are the Garfield and Grant episodes repeated, and public confidence in "expert" medical knowledge is again shaken.

The effect is a revulsion.

Since the fatal days of 1883, many of the doctrines of the schoolmen concerning extensive medication have been abandoned, and all schools of practice are more and more relying upon old-fashioned simple root and herb preparations and careful nursing, -the only reliances known to our an-

These methods and reliances are illustrated to-day in a series of oldfashioned roots and herbs preparations recently given to the world by the well-known proprietors of Warner's safe cure—preparations made from formulæ possessed by many of our oldest families, and rescued for popular use, and issued under the happy designation of Warner's Log Cabin

A jug of spring sarsaparilla was just as necessary in the "winter supplies" of fifty years ago as was a barrel of pork, and a famous medical authority says that the very general prevalence of the use of such a preparation as Log Cabin Sarsaparilla explains the rugged health of our ancestors.

While Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla is an excellent remedy for all seasons of the year, it is particularly valuable in the spring, when the system is full of sluggish blood, and requires a natural constitutional tonic and invigorator to resist colds and pneumonia, and the effects of a long winter. Philo M. Parsons, clerk of the City Hotel of Hartford, Conn., was prostrated with a cold which, he says, seemed to settle through my body. I neglected it, and the result was my blood became impoverished and poisoned, indicated by inflamed eyes. I was treated, but my eyes grew worse. I was obliged to wear a shade over them. I feared that I would be obliged to give up work."
"Under the operation of Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla and Liver Pills," he says, "the sore and inflamed eyes disappeared. My blood, I know, is in a healthier condition than it has been for years. I have a much better appetite. I shall take several more bottles for safety's sake. Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla is a great blood purifier, and I most heartily recommend it."

A few bottles of Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla used in the family now will save may a week of sickness and many a dollar of bills. Use no other. This is the oldest, most thoroughly tested, and the best, is put up the largest sarsaparilla bottle on the market, containing 120 doses. There is no other prepararation of similar name that can equal it. The name of its manufacturers is a guarantee of its superior worth.

While the great doctors wrangle over the technicalities of an advanced medical science that cannot cure disease, such simple preparations yearly snatch millions from untimely

Mr. Whymper, with two guides, had made the ascent of the Aiguille Verte, a peak of the Alps which had never been ascended before. They had left their porter in charge of their tent and provisions at a point some fifty-five useless. hundred feet below the summit. They had left this place early in the morning, had climbed to the summit, where they ate a luncheon of bread and cheese, and in the afternoon arrived at their camping station. "Here it is," said our worthy friend, producing a dirty piece of bread about as big as a half-penny roll. We three looked solemnly at the fluff-covered cheese, wine, eggs, sausages-all was gone past recovery. It was idle to grumble and useless to wait. We were light and could move quickly;

the porter was laden, inside and out. We went our hardest; he had to shuffle and trot. He streamed with perspiration; the mutton and cheese pozed out in big drops; he larded the glacier. We had our revenge, and at 8:15 re-entered Chamounix, amidst firing of cannon and other demonstrations .- Youth's Companion.

Mr. V--- of Brooklyn, New York city, writes: "While writing a paper on a medical subject I had occasion to use the technical term for a swoon, which I could not recall. At this point, being obliged to attend a lecture, spontaneously and apparently without reason-for the two subjects had no connection—the word 'syncope' shot across my mind; immediately after the medical paper came into my

A CHANCE IN A LIFETIME.

Any Grade of Watch for $1.00 per Week. The Co-operative Watch Club.

A new plan by which you can get a watch at spot cash wholesale price, on payment of a small weekly or monthly installment.

For example, 35 persons wish to buy a $35.00 watch each. They each pay $1.00 a week to us and every week we deliver Solo watch each. They each pay $1.00 aweek to us and every week we deliver them one watch (or we can send the watch C. O. D. (with privilege of examination) to some member chosen by the club who shall take it out with money subscribed. At each subscription it is decided by a drawing which member is to receive the watch, and so on until all are supplied. When a member gets his watch he gives to the club satisfactory security for the balance. Numoer of members, amount and date of payment and price and description of goods bought, will be arranged to suit purchasers. We will supply them with mutual forms of agreement (which they can sign as a guarantee to each other where required.) This will be found a satisfactory investment by any one contemplating the purchase of a watch. Instead of spending the money in different ways, for which you would have nothing to show, you will at the end of agreed time possess a good and lasting article, all paid for, without experiencing any strain on your purse. All intending members will receive our catalogue on application, and will be able to select from as complete an assortment as can be ofered, a watch or any article or articles in it to the value, and be assured of exactly what they are receiving and of its reliability, as we warrant all our goods and as our own reputation will testify. Something about Inventions.

A glance through the Patent Office Gazette is about as amusing as a trip through a museum. Certainly, the strange things there pictured and described are much more grotesque and

It would be well for inventors, as a rule, upon the completion of their first model for the Patent Office, to lock the thing in a trunk and lay out the amount of money necessary to patent the "thing" in buying mechanical books.

Buy a philosophy first of all; perhaps an arithmetic will need be studied to begin at the beginning.

After some knowledge of philosophy attained, a good work on mechanics should be procured and its contents investigated. Procure a book illustrating all the mechanical movements. and their combination, and see what has been done in the very line the inventor proposes to follow.

Every idea has to be reinvented about a dozen times, by as many men, and the last man who does it is sure the thing was never before thought of.

The before mentioned Patent Office Gazette illstrates a wrench, which would Gazette illstrates a wrench, which would shall forget the look he gave me. Mutton, loaves, man could move with his two elbows me and said in his severest voice, 'Go used as a vise. Had the inventor known anything of the lever, as illustrated in an elementary philosophy, he would have changed his wrench model into a milking stool, or a sheep yoke, before applying for (and securing) a patent thereon.

Wonder what kind of men the examiners are? Either they must be fullblooded automata, or their minds have been shattered by the thousands of mechanical monstrosities brought before arity between us after that." them in a never-ending stream.

In the list of car couplers alone are some less than 20,000, devices which might make passably good boat anchors, grappling irons and corn shellers, but which for coupling cars would be about as successful as the Keely motor.

Speaking of motors brings to mind the four or five hundredweight motors which have had money spent on them, the spring motors, the "power increasing" devices, and the "adjustable automatic, self-acting, combined motors," which bloom so sweetly every Springtime and then fade away to oblivion

If, as before stated, every man who has got the "inventive fever" would read up what has been done, before he wastes time and money in working up some useless device which is new to him but old to the better informed, then there would be less Patent Office dead wood and more good money in some would-be inventor's pockets.-American Cultivator.

THURSDAY, MARCH 29, 1888.

Much derision has been expressed over New Hampshire's prohibition laws, and 1818. the impression has been disseminated that they were a complete nullity; but here comes an associated press dispatch in the Free Press which tells us that all of the saloons in Concord, the capital of the state, have been closed, as the result of prosecutions, the proprietors declining the Reciprocity Treaty, granting in return longer to keep up the fight.

No event has lately come upon the country with more startling suddenness than the death of the Chief Justice of the United States, Morrison R. Waite, of Ohio. which was announced in the afternoon papers of last Friday. There had been reports of his brief illness, but there was no general apprehension of the fact that it was a fatal one. Although 72 years of age, he was in good health a week before, and discharging the important duties of his office. A man of solidity, rather than of brilliancy, he has been universally credited with those judicial qualities invaluable upon the bench—a calm, clear judgment, combined with painstaking faithfulness and freedom from partisar bias. Men may be found for the place, more eloquent, more brilliant in many ways, but not more valuable.

THOMPSON'S DIAGRAMS.

Mr. R. W. Thompson, in his valuable work, The History of Protective Tariff Laws, employs a number of diagrams for comparative illustration, which are very graphic. One shows the world's manufac tures, parallelograms of varying lengths exhibiting the relative value of the product of various countries. Another shows total industrial products of different countries, by squares of differing sizes; and another the comparative wealth, income and debt of various countries, by discs of differing sizes, the three elements occupying segments of each disc and vary much in their relative proportions. Reduced to figures, Mr. Thompson's diagrams

THE FISHERIES TREATIES.

The same treaty which acknowledged our right to continue unmolested, the deep sea fisheries on the Banks of Newfoundland and in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It also gave liberty to take fish on all the coasts of the British dominions in America, and to take, dry, and cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbors and creeks of Nova Scotia, Magdalen Islands, and Labrador.

to refuse fishing privileges on the ground that the war had put an end to all existing treaties, a proposition that we could not accept without at the same time acknowledging also that the treaty of 1783 was also invalid as to our independence and boundaries. The Treaty of Ghent (1815) made, therefore, no mention of the fish-

In 1818 a treaty was concluded in London by which our right to take fish on the coasts of Labrador and Newfoundland was defined to be within certain named limits, as also our right to dry and cure on the same coasts. The grants within these limits were expressly declared to be perpetual. At the same time we renounced forever the right to take, dry, or cure fish on or within three marine miles of any coasts, bays, creeks or harbors not included within these limits.

In other words, for the acknowledgment of this limited right recognized by the treaty of 1782 as an existing right, and for the privilege of curing fish on a limited portion of the coast of Newfoundland, we renounced forever all the remaining inshore fisheries.

At the time of this treaty, Canadian and American vessels had no trading rights in each other's ports. Commercial rights gradually grew up under mutual legislation until by an act of Parliment taking effect Jan. 1, 1850, it was agreed that American vessels should enjoy, in British ports, all the privileges enjoyed by British vessels in American ports. This statutory provision was independent of any treaty. It is in force to-day, and under it Canadian vessels freely avail themselves in our ports, of the privileges they deny to us in

The line called the three-mile limit was in 1818 understood to follow the coast, except at the mouths of rivers. This intepretation was accepted without question till 1841 when the headland theory was advanced in order still further to shut us out from guaranteed rights. Even the the Bay of Fundy, sixty miles wide, was declared closed to our fishermen. Against this most unwarranted assumption Mr. Everett, Minister to England, protested so vigorously that Lord Aberdeen made haste to reverse the Canadian claim. Another effort was made in 1852 to establish the headland theory. Again Mr. Everett pro tested and Mr. Wedster, then Secretary of the State, declared, in words whose force every American should feel to-day, that such a construction of the words used in the treaty was "Contrary to the intentions PLANTS FOR SALE of the contracting parties." Instead of insisting that Canada should Strawberries, abide by the plain letter of the treaty, and by the mutual statutory regulations of England and the United States, we consented, in 1854, to a new treaty known as the Reciprocity Treaty, an arrangement which could be terminated, on due notice after ten years. By it we were substantially admitted to the enjoyment of the inshore fisheries, but at the same time we

The Upsilantian. agreed to a schedule of exchange between this country and Canada which deprived agreed to a schedule of exchange between us of much revenue, and brought us little in return. This treaty was terminated, on our notice, March 17, 1866, and we were again under the provisions of the treaty of

> The Joint High Commission of 1871, agreed that all claims between the two countries should be submitted to Arbitration. This caused a fishery clause in the Treaty of Washington. By it we gained substantially the same privileges as under the admission of fish and fish-oil from Canada free of duty. Then, Great Britain claiming that we were receiving more than we gave in return, the matter was submitted to the Halifax Commission The appointment of the Belgian Minister to be the third member of that commission against our protests and in face of his manifest disability, by reason of his close relations to England, to be a fair referee is a stigma upon Great Britain. By his decision we were to pay, for twelve years use of the inshore fisheries,-which had been ours freely by our birthright treaty of 1783—the enormons sum of $5,500,000. The duties remitted during the same period amounted to $4,200,000, so that we paid about $800,000 a year for a privilege which was shown, by the statistics of five

The fisheries part of the Treaty of Washington could be terminated after ten years, on due notice. It was so terminated by act of Congress, and President Arthur issued a proclamation Jan. 31, 1885, giving notice that the privileges secured by it would cease to exist after July 1st, 1885. Notwithstanding this action, and without shadow of authority, Mr. West, the British Minister, proposed and Mr. Bayard agreed that the provisions of the treaty should continue for six months, Mr Bayard, June 19, in writing pledging the President to recommend the appointment of a Commission to consider the fisheries question, and Mr. West engaging that the British government would abstain from enforcing restrictive regulations against American fisheries. In December, 1885. the President accordingly recommended to Congress the appointment of such a Commission; but that body preferred rather to insist upon plain treaty rights and the privileges guaranteed by the high est authority of two sovereign Nations.

WAGES AND COST OF LIVING IN EUROPE AND AMERICA. The following table showing the rela tive cost of living, and the relative wages in Great Britain and America, is based on careful investigations by Carroll D. Wright, Chief of Bureau of Labor Statistics in Massachusetts. These results are considered by those best able to judge, as nearly accurate as care and study can our national independence, acknowledged make them. The table assumes that the same articles are used and in the same quantities in both countries. The num bers under "G. B." indicate how many dollars out of every hundred in the expense account for living, is expended for the article opposite

Clothing		13.25
Sundries	12.75	10.50
Rent		24.25
Total	$99.75	$116.50

The total is so near 100 and 117 respec ively that we will call them that, and in general terms, we may say that for every $100 paid in Great Britain for living, we pay in Massachusetts $117. If we take away the items of rent, it will reduce the cost substantially to the same figure in both countries. Farther west the items of rent would be reduced to the same figure, so the laborer can live in this country as cheap as in England. With the same care and fidelity in examining the statistics, the same Bureau finds that the wages in the same line of manufacture vary as 100 in Great Britain to 177 in pays $100 in wages for what Massachusetts pays $177.

The question then arises, how can Massachusetts compete with England, even though the raw material cost no more Can we pay 77 per cent. more wages and at the same time hold the market against England? Free traders say we can, but no intelligent workman believes it. The man who maufactures at least cost will supply the market and drive the others to England, notwithstanding the high tariff, commands our market to a large extent to day, and it is pertinent to ask how she does t. It is no mystery to business men. Her advantage comes solely from her low wages, and if we remove the tariff, it would be, by just so much as is removed. still more in her favor. Is it possible that any laboring man can fail to see what this effort to reduce the tariff means to him? If so, he is blinded to his own interest for it means that for every $177 he now earns, he would, under the proposed change, earn but $100, while his living would cost the same as now. This question may be politics to Carlisle and his followers, but to the laboring man, it is simply a question of bread and butter. It will be the height of wisdom, if he rejects the influence of a party name and makes an intelligent effort to save his home and its comforts. Free trade aims its heaviest blow at wages and the laboring man will find it out sooner or later to his sorrow. When he does, he will find how much more valuable a very little foresight would have been to him than a vast surplus of hindsight after the dam-

MY EASTER LILY.

In the black earth the root I laid-A dry, unlonely thing.

It seemed so far from what was fair,
"I only waste," I thought "my care."
"Nay, nay, it holds a royal flower:

It keeps a pledge of Spring.
Wait," whispered Paith, "in patient trust;
Thou shalt see beauty rise from dust."

To-day thy silver shining robe,
O Easter lily, wear.
Unfold thy golden heart; make sweet
With incense all the air.
Sing with mute lips thy Eastor song.
I hear it, and my faith grows strong.
He sees, who waits in patient trust,
Immortal beauty rise from dust.

THE EASTER SEASON. . Smithe, in Correspondence from Washington, April 13, 1882.

FROM THE PASSOVER TO EASTER. In the year 30 A. D., a small company of Jews celebrated the feast of the passover in the chamber of a house in Jerusalem The leader of the company was arrested that night, tried on a charge of heresy and sedition the next morning, condemned to death, and executed the same afternoon That was Friday; and early on the following Sunday he came out of his tomb and reappeared to his faithful band, alive and well. That miracle fully attested to those who had believed in him, the divine character that he had claimed, and assisted their rapid spread of the faith that he had taught—a faith which soon outgrew the traditional faith of his nation, upon which his faith was builded, and has since continued to spread until it is to-day the faith of every civilized nation, and a rapidly spreading and civilizing faith among every uncivilized people. The Jews, a civilized people but not a nation faction.

since that time, rejected the new faith

then, and have rejected it since.

One cannot help feeling a strange interest and sympathy with these people, when we believe that they possess a religion that was in its form and substance divinely ordained for them by miraculous communication from the invisible world—a religion so engrafted into their thought that was in its form and substance divineand life that now, after three thousand years of vicissitude, after eighteen hun dred years of national extinction, after dispersion among all peoples for fifteen 27 Congress St., centuries as no other people have ever been dispersed, after persecutions from every race upon the face of the earth for more than a thousand years for their religion and their traditional exclusiveness, subjects and vassals almost everywhere and citizens almost nowhere—after all this, so engrafted into their life and ingrained in their thought and instinct is that religion and their tradition of divine adoption, that to-day, whenever you meet one of them, in America or Europe, or Asia or Africa, or the Isles of the Sea, whether English in speech, or German or Pole, Persic or Berber, or Spanish or Greek his tongue, he is everywhere and always, alike in feature, in thought and tradition and worship, a Jew. Swallowed up and you see men doing who give time on goods lost to sight among other peoples for a hundred generations, isolated from his or use the credit system. We save the worth from his own and in contact with what other or how many other races soever, the Jew to-day, wherever found, in appearance and sentiment, in blood and belief, is as charge for worthless accounts, and give the distinctively Hebrew as the subjects of Herod at the beginning of our era; as the benefit to our customers. Maccabæan warriors or the hosts of Saul or the conquoring legions of Joshua; as those who sacrificed at Sinai, or the pious builders under Ezra, or those who cruciied the Galilean reformer. As one ac cepting the substantial verity of the Bibli cal history, the more I think of this strange | we spend our time in looking up bargains people and of their unparalleled history the more is my interest in them, and for our customers and waiting upon them sympathy with them, compelled; and I do not wonder at their part in the promptly when they call; and our prices in-New Testament history, half so much as at the superhuman vitality of their belief duce them to call twice. which has enabled it to survive all the conflicts of the succeeding ages, which would have stamped out and destroyed, I doubt not, any human system whatever.

THE MARRIAGE FEAST.

LESSON I, SECOND QUARTER IN-TERNATIONAL SERIES, APRIL 1.

Text of the Lesson. Matt. xxii. 1-14 Golden Text Rev. xix, 9 - Memorize Verses 11-14-Comment by Rev. H. S.

[From Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, Philadelphia, publisher.] Notes.—Made a marriage, i. e., a marriage feast. Servants, the "inviters," referring to the prophets to the time of the Baptist. let that cold of yours run on. You think it is a light thing. But it may run into catarrh. Or into pheumonia. Or contact the propose to the were bidden, anciently a double call was given, first to give them time to prepare and then to come. Made light of the propose to the pr it, in Greek same words as neglect, Heb. ii, 3. Spitefully, showed their spite to the king by treating his servants cruelly. Armies reference is made to the troops under Titus Vespasian that destroyed Jerusalém. Not worthy, the Jews who rejected Christ. Guests, the Gentiles. Wedding garment, a robe was furnished by the host.

There are essential differences between this parable and the one in Luke xiv, 15-24. In the one only the infinite goodness and grace of God appear; here judgment as well.

V. 1. Jesus spoke this parable either in answer to the spoken words or the inquiring looks of the chief priests and Pharisees, whose minds had been much stirred, Matt. xxi, 45. It need not be assumed that he spoke a number of parables, but spoke in parabolic form.

V. 2. The royal personage is God the Father. The king's son is the Saviour, who would woo and win the heart and hand of humanity. All who requite his love are united to him in eternal wedlock. The guests are his people

V. 3. The feast with all its bounty ready, the servants are sent to call the bidden ones, with the result that they would not come. In the church militant there are to be found the good and bad; but in the purified We have here a hint as to the wretched estate of the wicked in eternity.

The chief priests and Pharisees here, as in the previous parable, must have perceived that Jesus was again speaking of them, and in verses 3 to 7 was alluding to the preaching of the gospel by the prophets and John the Baptist, who, as the servants of the king, had long preached, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." These verses contain the gospel history to that time, with a warning or a prophecy as to the fate of the bidden ones and the doom of their country, the destruction of Jerusalem, as the consequence of their treatment of the king's servants, and their rejection of his message.

These priests and Pharisees, like their counterparts of the present day, did not realize, and therefore did not even attempt to live up to their privileges.

V. 5. The pressing invitation of the king's special servants, speaking the words of the king, "Come unto the marriage," and "come now," were treated as of no moment. The possession of a little property, the attempt to make a little money, deadened their spiritual perceptions, leading some of them on from listlessness to disobedience, rebellion and

V. 6. From mere want of interest and preoccupation with other affairs, there follows hatred and murder. They wantonly inflict outrage and later kill his servants. Reference is doubtless made to the early martyrs. like Stephen and James, who perished at the hands of the Jews. They persecuted Paul all through his life, while insulting and scourging the other apostles. V. 11. It is customary in ordinary society for the host to be the first to meet his guests as they arrive; but with royalty it is otherwise, the sovereign does not appear until the company have all assembled. So in this case we read, "the king came in to see the guests." When he saw there a man who had not on a wedding garment. This one is selected to represent a class.

V. 12. Seeing that the servants had been commanded to gather in all, "bad and good," prepared and unprepared; what reason had the king to expect every invited one who should accept the invitation to appear in a certain kind of dress? In explanation, Dean Plumptre says: "The framework of the parable probably presupposes the Oriental custom of providing garments for the guests who were invited to a royal feast. Ward-robes, filled with many thousand garments, formed part of the wealth of every eastern prince. * * * On this assumption the act of the man who was found 'not having a wedding garment' was one of willful insult. He came in the 'filthy rags' (Isaiah lxiv, 6) of his old life, instead of putting on the 'white linen' meet for a kingly feast (Eccles. ix, 8; Rev. iii, 4, 5) which had been freely offered him. What, then, is the 'wedding garment?' Some have seen in it the outward ordinance of baptism, some the imputed righteousness of Christ covering the nakedness of our own unrighteousness. The first answer, it is believed, is at once too nar-row and too technical." Perhaps the best explanation is that Christ's spotless righteousness is the robe which we must wear to be acceptable, see Romans xiii, 8.

Note here, at the present time the invitation to the gospel feast is to all good, bad and indifferent. The command to the servants of the cross is peremptory, explicit and inclusive; the worse the men, the greater their need, and God's servants have no choice in the matter: "Yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel," see I Cor. ix, 16.

"Myriads are not chosen because they do not come. And we know not how many who come fail of being chosen, because they have not accepted salvation by Christ. The dogma that they are not chosen because they are secretly predestinated by God's decree not to be chosen, affirms simply what is not said or implied."—Whedon.

"One of our generous and philanthropic citizens invited fifty children from the poor Office and Paint Depot, Worden est portion of our city to enjoy a Christmas dinner at his home. Imagine his surprise when a poor little boot black, with ragged clothes and torn shoes, stepped up to him in the dining room and said: "Here's ten cents for my dinner; it's all I made to-day." You smile at the picture of the ragged boy offer ing his last dime to the man worth millions of dollars, but does it not suggest to you a poor mortal in his own ragged righteousness standing before God, trying to buy a seat at the marriage feast?"—Rev. Forrest E. Dager.

> Historical Items About Emeralds. Pliny relates that a tomb at Cyprus bore lion carved with eyes of emeralds so bright they frightened away the fish in the sea Nero wore an eyeglass of emerald, which was supposed good for the sight, and it is said that lapidaries who cut emeralds have good eyesight, because the hue of the stone refreshes the eye. The Orientals believe that wearing an emerald imparts courage and averts disaster. It was ground down and taken as a medicine in doses of six grains as a cure for various disorders. At the conquest of Peru the Spaniards captured hundred weights of emeralds, and one dedicated to the goddess Esmeralda was the size of an ostrich egg. Cortez gave his bride a large emerald carved like a rose, which roused the queen's envy and lost him the court favor.-Wide Awake.

The Official Cigarette

The habit of smoking cigarettes among public officials is alarmingly on the increase. It is due no doubt to the fact that the cigarette affords a means of satisfying an appetite or craving for tobacco, and affords enough pleasure for the smoker to last for the time it is wanted. "A cigar or a pipe is too much of a smoke," said an official talking to an American representative about the matter, "in the office, where you are liable to be called on at a moment's notice by a lady or summoned into the presence of [A true copy.]

vail among all the officials who were seen using the little article. Army officers as a rule were noticed to be addicted largely to the habit of using the cigarette. They found it cheaper in the long run than cigars. It has now become common among them to offer a friend a cigarette. If refused, the reply is: "Well, I used to smoke cigars, but I find the cigarette is more convenient." Nearly all the young men, and, in fact, not a few of the old men in high social life can be seen smoking them. At any one of the receptions it is customary now to see groups of men in the gentlemen's room puffing away vigorously on the 'little delight.' It is a rarity to see a cigar used on such occasions. A large tobacconist here stated in conversation to-day that the sale of cigarettes was enormous in this city and was not confined to any class. He stated that the government clerks bought largely of them, as they considered it much cheaper for them to use on the sly during office

Politicians Already Speculating as to the Successor of the Dead

Chief Justice. Morrison Remich Waite, chief justice of the United States Supreme Court, died at his residence in Washington of inflammation of the bowels, at an early hour Friday morn-He had not been in good health for a long time, and was generally looked upon as eing rather feeble, though nobody expected to hear of his demise so soon. On the previ ous Saturday evening he and his daughter dined with Senator Hearst's family, and he appeared to be in fair health and spirits. Upon arriving home, however, he was taken suddenly ill with what for a time appeared

THE LATE CHIEF JUSTICE. to be cramp colic. Dr. Winslow was called in and administered remedies which relieved him in a short time, and Sunday he felt much better. The Bell telephone decision was to be rendered in the Supreme Court Monday, and he was very desirious of reading it himself. His physician advised strongly against this, but the justice insisted, at least, in listening to its reading by Justice Blatchford. No rumor regarding the illness of Justice Waite had reached the public, and his condition was not commented upon.

On returning home Monday evening he was attacked with acute bronchitis, and remained wakeful throughout the entire night, and on Tuesday he suffered greatly. It was not until Wednesday that his illness began to assume a serious aspect. On that day there appeared symptoms of pneumonia of a ircumscribed character. Inflammation of the bowels also began to manifest itself. He was kept quiet by the use of anæsthetics on Thursday. Thursday night he became more restless than ever, and he expired a little after 6 o'clock Friday morning.

Mrs. Waite is on her way from California, She was summoned some days ago. His daughter, Miss Mary F. Waite, and his son, Mr. C. C. Waite, vice-president of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad, were at the bedside when he died. He will be buried at Toledo, Ohio.

Mr. Edmunds announced the death of the Chief Justice in the Senate in brief but appropriate remarks. On his motion the Senate adjourned. The death was also announced in the House, which adjourned. The Supreme Court met at 12 and adjourned mmediately on the formal announcement of the death by Justice Bradley. Committees f the House and Senate will be appointed to accompany the remains.

Morrison Remich Waite, LL. D., was born at Lyme, Conn., in 1816. He was graduated from Yale in 1837, a classmate of Senator Evarts and ex-Attorney General Edwards Pierrepont. He studied law at Lyme, and moved to Ohio after his admission to the bar. He practiced with great success at Maumee City and Toledo. He was elected to the Ohio legislature in 1849, but subsequent to that experience he resolutely declined all political and judicial preferment until he built up a great practice in the higher branches of his profession. In 1871 he was counsel for the United States in the Geneva arbitration on the Alabama claims. He was president of the Ohio constitutional convention in 1873, and in March of the following year President Grant nominated him for

Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the Sen-Upon the death of Chief Justice Chase candidates for the vacancy were numerous.

Among those most prominently mentioned were Caleb Cushing and J. Edwards Pierre-But President Grant from the very first had fixed his choice. He had know Judge Waite for years intimately, and was a great admirer of the man as a jurist and a private citizen. Upon the announcement of s nomination great surprise was expressed throughout the country, and Waite was spoken of in many quarters as an obscure and inexperienced judge. The Senate, however, confirmed him promptly, and before many months had elapsed the new chief justice had established his reputation among the best lawyers in the country. Roscoe Conkling spoke of him ten years ago as the greatest lawyer in America. He was a great favorite with the leading members of the bar; fair and impartial in his treatment of practitioners, and dmired for the dignity with which he pre sided over the highest court in the land.

Justice Waite's Successor. Already speculation is rife as to the probable successsor of the dead chief justice. Judges Hoadley and Jackson and Senator Morgan have been most prominently mentioned among those who, it is believed, stand a tair chance of succeeding to the position, and many others are talked of. There will be a lively undercurrent contest for the place.

The Office of Chief Justice.

The chief justice is the presiding officer of the high judicial assemblage, now numbering nine, and is the mouthpiece of the court. He announces all decisions not accompanied by opinions and prepares his share of the latter. His vote in the consultation chamber in deciding a case has no tie-breaking power in the event of an equal division of an complete bench. The assignment of cases to the associate justices to write the opinions, after the tenor of the decision has been arrived at, rests with the chief justice, who also makes the appointments in and about the court, by and with the advice and consent of his fellows.

The salary of the chief justice is $500 more per year than the other justices receive—$10,500 per annum.

When the grievance committee of the brotherhood engineers several days ago called off the boycott on Burlington freight they announced their intention to confine the strike to the "Q" system. To the initiated there was more in this announcement than appeared on the surface. It is beyond quesion that an understanding between the striking engineers and the swichmen of the 'Q" road was arrived at fully a week ago. The programme, as far as can be learned, was the switchmen should strike on the pretext that their lives were imperiled, and by so doing would receive both moral and financial support from the locomotive brother-A strong attempt was also made to draw the brakemen into a similar compact. and it is considered an assured fact by many future and on a similar pretext. HONEST OLD DICK.

James W. Tate, Treasurer of Kentucky

The intelligence has created a profound ket." sensation throughout Kentucky. Mr. Tate was a most popular man. He was ten times nominated and elected State Treasurer by the largest majorities on the ticket. The discovery of his shortage was brought about by his own conduct. On Thursday last Senator Wright had a long talk with Tate, who questioned him closely and at great length as to the exact provisions in the extradition treaties between the United States and Canada, and also made lengthy inquiries about the treaty between the United States and Mexico. At the conclusion of the talk, which was one of great length, Tate thanked Senator Wright for the information Shortly afterward it began to be rumored round the streets that there was only small amount in the bank to the credit Tate, and when the treasurer was not seen on either Friday or Saturday, Auditor Hewitt suggested that an investigation of the circumstances should be immediately made This was done. Expert accountants went to work on the treasurer's books and it was demonstrated that there was a great shortage in his accounts. In the meantime Gov. Buckner had been notified and he issued orders placing the treasurer's office in charge of the auditor and the attorney-general.

Tuesday the governor sent the following official notification to the legislature, which

"Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives: It is my painful duty to announce to you the fact that, for reasons which appear on the accompanying account of the governor, fauditor. and attorney general, the treasurer of the state has been suspended from the exercise of his official duties. The hasty examination of his books induce the belief that there is a large deficit in his accounts. This examination was made Tuesday. The action reported to you was taken last Monday as soon as the deficit appeared. The fact is communicated to you at the earliest moment for your information and action. It is believed that the bond of the treasurer will fully cover any possible deficit that a more complete investigation will reveal. In the meantime the auditor and secretary of state have been directed to take temporary charge of the office of the treasurer. Respectfully, S. B. BUCKNER. Accompany the message was one of the same import from the sinking-fund commis-On motion a committee was appointed to act with the state officials in prosecuting the investigation. What has become of the money no one can tell. Tate never speculated nor gambled. He is said not to have been an extravagant liver, but year by year the money has leaked out, the shortage seeming to run back a dozen years. It is said Mr. Tate set his sonn-law, Alfred Martin, up in business a few ble, but this could not have cost over $10,-000. The almost universal theory is that "Uncle Dick's" kindness of heart ran away with his business integrity.

Mr. Herndon, of Louisville, who was at one time teller in a bank at Frankfort, says that Tate's defalcation will involve parties and state officials of high standing. He says that it was the custom of many of the state officials to go to Tate and get him to cash notes for them, promising to pay them as soon as their vouchers were due. When they secured their vouchers, however, they would deter payment, and the good-natured treasurer, failing to push these claims, accumulated a mass of such securities as by this time must be simply appalling. It is said that memoranda in the treasurer's office shows a loan of $25,000 to the Yeoman ompany and another of $50,000 to a certain whisky trust. The audi or for some time past has been ressing Tate for a settlement, which ought to have been made in January. On Thursday morning Tate left for Louisville. On Saturday the auditor wired Louisville earned that Tate had gone to Cincinnati ou Friday morning. Since then no trace of the missing man has been found, and it is believed ed that he has gone either to Canada or

Mexico. ANOTHER THEATER HORROR. Horrible Scenes Attending the Burning of a Theater in a Portu-

The house was full of spectators at the time Eighty bodies have been taken from the ruins. Most of those burned were in the third row of boxes and galleries, where whole families were suffocated. There was a terrific struggle at the door when the spectators tried to escape. Large numbers were suffocated and trampled upon. Many or reaching the street were so seriously injured that they vomited blood. Nearly all the victims were spectators. The actors escaped n theatrical costume. Many in the theater finding themselves unable to reach the doors, jumped from the windows. Some orpses were found in the stage boxes. The lights were extinguished shortly after the fire roke out, thus adding to the confusion. Large gangs of workmen are exploring the ruins. Two bodies were discovered locked n a close embrace.

This would be a sop to the switchmen's union, which was badly beaten in the Lake Shore strike of two years go. The indications are that there is very little ground for this rumor. As a matter o fact, the switchmen have always bitterly complained of the trentmeat they received from the brotherhood during the Lake Shore troubles. As one of them expressed it Sun> avs that nothing is ever done when a man falls overboard on that body of water. The reason, he alleges, is that the water in the lake is so cold that a man can not live in it during the time it takes to stop a rapidly moving vessel and lower a boat. In twenty years he never knew but one man who fell verboard who escaped death. Others were apparently killed by the shock produced by falling onto such cold water. It is said, too, that the lake never gives up its dead, and sailors aver that no corpse was ever seen floating on the lake.

BY JOHN M' GOVERN.

The small boy was to leave school and go up on the farm east of town. This calamity came upon him because he was poorer than most boys; he had neither father nor mother, and the self-abnegation of his remaining relatives had endured well, in that it had already lasted two years. Lima prairie had been the limits of his known world. Upon the summit of a great wagonload of things needed to complete the furnishing of the farm-house the boy boxful, that the great Riley demanded ed was no crime. The small boy would and the man pierced the neck o' woods that rimmed Lima prairie, and emerged | the demi-god-a large, broad-faced, | the outrage at Riley Rose's. into Pretty prairie, with its little church-spire far off at one side. Here was a world as large as the boy's own world, and he lived in it something like an hour-an hour that he never forgot, but why he knows not. Then, in the March equinox, as the man and the boy toiled up a hill into another neck o' woods, helping the tired horses, the party came upon the setting sun, standing in the straight western road. And as the darkness closed in rapidly, the man pleasantly chattering with the boy, told him to look around him, for he was now coming out on English prairie. A third world in a day. The man sang, for he was traveling toward his new-made wife. The boy grew which had risen with him that baleful of the church, claiming $10,000 damages for day sank and left him with only a part of his day completed. Then the weariness of the journey came to set the body on watch where the spirit had been the only sentry, and the small boy grew happier. Across English prairie rattled the lumber wagon, and, at last, so said the man, the road turned straight toward home. As the step-children take slowly to the name of "mother" for their father's second wife, so this name of "home," for a place the boy had never seen, and never wanted to see came upon him unpleasantly. Perhaps all things which happen to an orphan partake him unpleasantly. But now, well along in the late evening, a "pair of bars" is reached. The twain let the bars down, the farm itself is entered, and a half mile down a lane a candle twinkles, and the good wife peers out into the darkness from the log-house. Here the man and the woman are to loway arrested Brown and he was held on | pluck riches and happiness from one hundred and sixty acres of land that has been "rented out" for ten years previously.

enough to adore him afar. And then a happy morning, when, in a neighborly way, the farmer and the boy went to borrow a plowpoint or a short whiffle-tree of Riley Rose. There was a log-house, but in what contrast to the one in which the small boy lived! The timber all hewn; two pumps at the door, the front yard green with grass and yet shady with big oaks. gravel walks, a picket-fence between house and barn-yard, and a great swing. But the very charm of the place lay in the barn-yard—a ten-acre grove of healthy oak saplings some the road, over a stake-and-rider worm fifteen years old. My mother is living here now but she does not know of the accident or of my being hurt because I did not want to make her worry, so you see I can't go to see her looking as I do. The accident was caused by an engine becoming unmanageable and mashing into a string of cars. I was knocked off a caboose and dislocated my shoulder by the fall. Then six cars and the engine passed over me. In trying to save myself I swung my arm over the brake beam of the caboose. It threw me against a frog, breaking my right arm at the elbow and my left leg at the ankle. My right leg was twisted up in the footboard of the engine and broken in two places. The ash-pan of the engine broke my neck and five ribs-three on one side and two on the other. The sixth

"I had a funny time of it when I began to get back the use of my limbs. If I wanted to walk across the room when I'd try to start I couldn't, and then when I did get started I'd go in a great hurry. If I tried to raise my right hand the chances are my left would flop up instead. I'm over that now. I'm a well man now except for being a little nervous, as you see, and not able to keep still long. I'm lame, too, in one leg, and my head hangs crooked. The pain that's left is in my spine. It reminds me of a bottle of water with a bubble in it. The bubble goes slowly up my spine, jumps the break at my

"If you ever happen to find a silver dollar in the course of your travels, you et it lie right where it is when you see it," said a jolly young broker yester-

"Coming down on the elevated a few days ago," he continued, "I noticed something bright wedged in between the basket-work seat to the wooden arm. I poked her out with my knifeblade and found my prize to be a silver dollar. I had never found any money before, and I felt so good that when I got off the train I stopped into a cigar store and bought four cigars for a dollar, instead of three for a quarter, as usual. That noon at luncheon I felt awfully thirsty, and being a dollar ahead I ordered a bottle of claret. Later, buoyed up by the same thought, I asked the boys to take something, and the round cost me 90 cents. When it came time to go home the elevated trains were crowded, so I thought I'd spend my dollar for a hansom cab and drive home, stopping at a theatre where, on account of my find, I bought tickets of a speculator instead of at the office. I told my wife about my luck and showed her the identical dollar, which, I had saved. She was delighted and insisted on my having the piece smoothed off on one side and the place and date of my good fortune inscribed thereon, the carrying out of which conceit cost me $2.50. Altogether, I should think my find cost me nearly $10; so take my advice, and if you run across any stray dollars don't pick 'em up."-New York Sun.

Interviewed by a Pipe.

"I was once sent to interview the Governor of Kentucky on an important question," said a well-known Louisville newspaper man. "Just before reaching the State House I thoroughly lighted my pipe, a large, black brierroot, and forgetting myself still further, I walked into the Governor's private office still smoking. He gave me a hard look, and, now realizing my breach of politeness, I said:

"Help" In the Far West,

A Denver man says that his servants frequently come into his parlor to help entertain company. He gave a dinner party a few weeks ago, and his serva nt was told to serve wine. One of the guests declined, and the girl expressed her astonishment by saying: "Don't yez want no wine?"

The gentleman replied that he did not, when the girl looked at him for a moment and said: "What's the matter? Do you drink hard?"

Another member of the group said that his servant would not work on Sundays and had two nights to herself. She came in one night and asked if she and her young man could have the parlor. The gentleman also related how he and his wife surprised a servant at the theater. He and his wife attended a Dixey performance, and his wife swept the house with her glasses, and was almost paralyzed to see the household terror in a fashion box with her young man. She had borrowed a Nile green silk dress that, belonged to the mistress and was simply ravishing. Upon being expostulated with she replied that she had no dresses and would not stay in any house where she could not have accommodations. - Nashville American.

By Grace E. Mansfield, (12 years old.) city there lived in an elegant house, a little boy whose name was Dick O',Donald. He was seven years old, and an only child. He had everything he wanted, but one thing made him feel very sad; it was that his father was a drinking man. His nurse Tillie was a very nice story teller. She used to tell him about the faries that lived in the haunted castle that gave people everything they asked for. One day after Tillie had been telling him about Mr. E. N. Bissell of V.ermont, during his recent visit here, purchased sheep from the flocks of Isaac Shaw, Charles Parsons and J. S. and F. C. Wood. These sheep go to Australia.

there was a thing in the course of human events which was not to be expected, it was that in so short a time after leaving our dear Ypsilanti, we should see the American coast again. Butthen "L'homme propose et Dieu dispose." Let me tell

We sailed all right on Saturday, March 10, at 4 p. m., in very comfortable quarters on our beautiful steamer. The sun was bright, winds were favorable, we were soon in the Gulf stream and it was as warm as in May. No one was seasick, and the captain was in the very best of humor But the change was to come. Early on Thursday, the 15th, we saw a steamer making signals of distress. She was lying out of our course, so we turned about and when we came within a mile of her, a series of signalling began which ended in our captain's consenting to take the unfortunate steamer in tow and return to Halifax. She proved to be the steam-ship Netherlands, Red Star Line, from Antwerp, bound for New York. Her machinery was totally disabled, and she had been drifting for five days. There were 700 persons on board, and starvation stared them in the face. Our captain of fered to take all the people on board and take them to New York, but they prefer-red not to leave the steamer. Then boats were lowered, the first officer from the Netherlands came over, and some bargain or other must have been struck, and a pretty advantageous one for our side it must have been for it is not a little thing to turn around in mid ocean and take yourself and all the passengers to a place you don't want to go to. Still hardly anything else could have been done. These poor people could not be left to their fate. On the 17th inst. we met the steamer Arabian of the Allan Line, and asked them to relieve us of the Netherlands, but they flatly refused. We are still a good many miles from Halifax and it seems quite unertain when we shall reach it. We are having very cold weather and hard winds and to see the poor disabled steamer bob oing up and down in our wake makes on hink of the worst horrors of seasickness We yesterday told them that the Empero residence on Harvey street the 25th in his of Germany had died on the 9th inst.

Geo. Litchard has rented the Lake Ridge hotel and will take possession about April 1st.

They then asked for newspapers, and several were put in a tin box and sent over by means of Sir William Thompson's patent sounding-machine wire. They got the papers all right, and a hearty cheer does not seem much thicker than a pin, still it resisted the full strength of our forward motion, and the wind and waves of the hard breathing Atlantic.

Halifax is in sight. The coast seems quite mountainous and looks as dark blue as indigo. We have been going through fields of loose ice, beautifully phosphorescent at night.

Pancake in Variety.

On cold winter mornings pan cakes of all kinds hold an important place at the breakfast table. The cherished buckwheat cake, most prominent of all, from Thanks-giving Day until early Spring is seldom absent from the morning meal in the gen-uine American household. When prop-erly made, this is the most delicious of all the griddle cakes, but it has been against it when made from yeast or risin over night that it was difficult to make light and sweet, and that disagreeable effects frequently followed its eating. It is found that by the use of the Royal Baking Powder to raise the batter these objections have been entirely overcome, and that buckwheat cakes are made a most delicious food, light, officers, to be run and owned by Detroit.
